The Biggest Tobacco Crop.

Mr. J. A. Radford, of the Square, on the Clarksville pike, is the largest tobacco grower in Christian county, in not Kentucky. This year he has in 200 acres of land in one field.

Up to the time the worms began their ravages he cultivated the crop with eleven hands, but he now has employed 75 hands killing the worms. In one field he has 30 acres men in one squad of workers who are working day and night to save his forces.

The earlier planting is now ready for the knife and is in fine condition and a splendid crop. Many of the larger plants measure seven feet from tip to tip of the top leaves.

Mr. Radford has 800 acres in the county and it is one of the finest tracts of land in the county.

Ben Carroll Nominated.

A Magisterial district convention for Pembroke was held in the city court room Wednesday for the purpose of nominating a Democratic candidate for constable.

The convention was organized by electing Jos. E.

Moseley chairman and R. L. Moseley

vice-chairman. Mr. Carroll and Mr. Rose were voted for. Pappy's school house with 3 votes and Edwards

Mill with 2 votes voted for Carroll and North Pembroke with 2 votes for Rose. Mr. Carroll was accordingly declared the nominee and his nomination was made unanimous.

Boilers Hold a Meeting.

A small meeting of gold standard

Democrats, who propose to bolt the Democratic ticket, was held at Mosey Hall Tuesday night and decided to hold a meeting on the 15th to send delegates to the convention at Louisville. The gold standard Democrats and the meeting are very reticent about who was on hand and what was done.

Perhaps when the county meeting is held on the 15th, the public will be able to derive some idea of the probability strength of the movement in this county.

Mr. Noel, who graduated at Princeton College this summer, went to Mt.

Carmel to preach, and was stricken with illness. Miss Kincaid went to his bedside with members of his family, and when she was there she was told that a big ratification meeting of the few who had voted for the ticket will be more offset by Republicans and Populists who believe in an American financial system.

Little River Baptist Association is in session this week at Hurricane

Church in Trigg County. Rev. A. W.

Mecham, the moderator, who announced last year he would not again accept that position, which he had held for nearly thirty years, is sick at his home near Graycey and not able to attend services. It is likely that

Cap. W. J. Stoe was chosen moderator though no news has been received from the meeting.

Three Prisoners Escape.

Three negroes, Upshaw, O'Brian,

Jim Green and Roy Boales, escaped from the work house guard Tuesday evening and are still at large. The work house was broken open near just East of the city when the three prisoners gave the guard the sign. Boales is serving time for robbing

Josh Wright and O'Brian and Green were sent up for robbing the store of Mr. G. M. Young.

Swallowed a Fence Staple.

The three-year-old son of Mr. W.

T. Allen of Pembroke, swallowed a wire fence staple Tuesday while playing in the yard. He was immediately taken to Nashville for surgical treatment and was reported doing well yesterday.

Frosted by Heat.

Pembroke, Ky., Aug. 6.—Mr. H. R.

Poore, of this place, was prostrated

by the intense heat at noon yesterday, and for a short time his friends despaired of his life, but he is now resting very well.

Bennie West Getting Well.

Bennie West, the negro man shot

by Jack Mason at Graycey, Saturday night, is getting well. He is at his home in this city. Mason has not yet been arrested.

RICHEST MAN IN MAINE.

Arthur Sewall and His Successful Business Career.

An Able Man of Wide Interests and is a Native Son — Comes from an Honored Race of Shipbuilders.

Mr. Arthur Sewall, the democratic nominee for vice president, is the richest man in Maine. His wealth is estimated from $20,000,000 to $30,000,000. He is a man known to the extent that he is known to be the author of a good business rather than as a man of politics. But while he is not and never has been a politician, and while he has never sought nor held any public office, he has been near the less for many years a power in the financial and commercial — a man whose word and advice stand for New England to a greater extent, possibly, than the word and advice of any other democrat of that section of the country. His utterances a year ago in favor of silver have discredited him in his own state, which is the strongest hold of the monetarists; but he is still, however, and this is shown by the recent selection of a democrat favoring the gold standard as his successor in the democratic national committee, or who has been chosen to represent the party at the national convention. But he is recognized by all who know him—and they include scores of business men of San Francisco as well as scores in New York—as an extremely able, well-rounded statesman.

Mr. Sewall was born in Bath about 30 years ago, of a stock long prominent and honored in his state and identified with the democratic party from its birth. He inherited a capacity for large business enterprises from his father, Mr. Edward, and while yet a very young man, with his brother he assumed the management of the large ship-building plant which had been developed by his father and his grandfather. Through the combination of the two brothers, the two brothers—the business grew and the ships multiplied until, when American shipping had reached itsheyday, there were few ports in the world in which there could not be found a vessel of the United States gunboats Castine and Machias and the ram Katahdin, and other enterprises. A few years ago he was president of the Maine Central railroad. He is now president of a bank in Bath. He is reported to have a large sum in leather in New York some months ago.

THE SEWALL FAMILY.

A peculiar Political Tangle is Between

Mr. Sewall and his Brother in Bath.

Mr. Sewall has always lived in Bath. His wife is also born in Bath. Personally he is a reserved man, not easy of approach. His appearance is impressive. He has two sons—Harold M. and William D. The latter, the younger, is associated with his father in business enterprises. He is about the same age, particularly enough of the same age as the man with whom his father will go before the people for votes at the tail end of the ticket, has already had more than a score of political光榮es than his father had.

He graduated with honors from Harvard in 1882, and two years later he was made vice consul at Liverpool by President Cleveland, and later by his father, George T. Russell became consul. Shortly afterward he was promoted to the consul generalship at Apia, Samoa. Here, though young and a novice in diplomacy, he became very popular with the natives and the American community, but Secretary of State Bayard recalled him, at the request of President Cleveland, who considered that his course in the delicate matter was not in agreement with that of the United States. He returned to America, having been about 18 months in Samoa.

Thereafter he was sent to Samoa again, and remained there for twenty years. In 1893, when Indians came into the民主黨 column for Tilden, the Sewall satisfaction found expression in the bestowal of the name "Indians" upon one of the largest and finest ships ever built in the port, and which was about ready for the launch.

The Sewall family has always been democratic, although as a family it has seldom or never sought to control in any way party action in either municipal or national politics. In 1893, when Indians came into the democratic column for Tilden, the Sewall satisfaction found expression in the bestowal of the name "Indians" upon one of the largest and finest ships ever built in the port, and which was about ready for the launch.

Arthur Sewall is about the only man in the country who has persisted in building ships in the face of what other builders have given up. During the administration of Cleveland and later in every wooden ship build yard on both coasts. But during the last few years of the eighties Mr. Sewall, believing that a turn for the better would soon come, gave up his outfit and soon with greater earnestness than ever before. There followed in quick succession four monsters, each representing a sum beyond $125,000. These were the Rappahannock, the Columbia, the Susquehanna, and the Roanoke, all wooden vessels, averaging about 3,000 tons net each, capable of carrying easily a tonnage in cargo of half as much more. These vessels the Rappahannock was destroyed by fire, from spontaneous combustion, in the South Pacific ocean some years ago.

The other three are still afloat, making the long voyages, and one or another is frequently seen in the East river. The Roanoke is the largest. This a three-masted schooner of Jess that was sent to San Francisco.

BRYAN AND SEWALL.

The Standard Bearers Chosen by the National Democracy.

Romantic Career of William Jennings Bryan—His Powers as an Orator and Pleader—Beautiful Family Life.

William Jennings Bryan was born in Salem, Marion county, Ill., on March 1860. At the age of 15 he entered Springfield College, and graduated valedictorian in 1881. For the next two years he attended Union law college in Chicago, serving in the office of Lyman Trumbull, and after graduating went into practice at Lincoln, Ill. In 1883 he removed to Hopkinsville, and became a member of the law firm of Treadwell & Bryan. He was elected to Congress in the First Nebraska district in 1886 over W. J. Connell, of Omaha, and was reelected in 1892 over Allen W. Field, of Lincoln.

WILLIAM JENNINGS BRYAN.

In 1894 Mr. Bryan declined a third nomination and was nominated by the democratic state convention for United States senator by the Indiana delegation of the convention. He polled a sweep vote. The republicans, however, had a majority in the legislature and Bryan was defeated for the senatorship. Since Mr. Bryan's congressional term expired, he has devoted his time exclusively to spreading the doctrine of free silver.

Mr. Bryan first appeared in the political arena of Nebraska in the campaign of 1888, when he stumped the first district for J. Sterling Morton, nominee for congress. The same year he declined a nomination for the state legislature. On July 30, 1890, he was nominated for congress, and wrote the platform on which he ran. Nobody but himself could be elected.

He stumped the district on the tariff issue and won fame as a political orator throughout the state. He defeated his republican adversary solely by his power on the stump.

CHAMP CLARK'S TRIBUTE.

Senators Bryan Once the Greatest in the Senate.

In a recent interesting sketch of W. J. Bryan, Champ Clark, the Missouri senator and statesman, after drawing a comparison between Samuel J. Randall and Mr. Bryan, thus describes the latter:

"In foreign lands he is well established, for greater reputation than did Randall in the same length of time. Indeed, it may be said without any extravagance that when Bryan quit congress he had a widespread fame as a speaker. The same year he declined a nomination for the state legislature. Whether the New Englanders who batted his ideas deep into the minds of men as did the Pennsylvanians is an entirely different question; for as late as 1894 the line of cleavage made by Bryan in the democratic party on the tariff was easily discernible from the naked eye. When 37 of his disciples bolted the Wilson bill, and several others had the will to bolt, but lacked the courage."

Bryan is a colleague scholar, and has stored away in his consciousness much of the golden grain of wisdom and little of the husks, and it is all there for use, either as argument or embellishment. Some men are so ugly and ungainly that it is a positive advantage to have them as speakers, for their handsomeness and gracefulness that they are on good terms with the audience before they open their lips. Of the latter class Bryan is a shining example. His appearance is a passport to the hearts of all men who can think and read. He is the picture of health, mental, moral and physical. He stands about five feet ten, weighs about 170, is a pronounced brunet, has a massive head, a clean-shaven face, an aquiline nose, a slender jaw, square chin, a broad chest, large lustrous dark eyes, a mouth extending almost from ear to ear, teeth white as pearls, and hair—what there is left of it—black as midnight. Beneath his eyes is a prominent test, which suggests youth, and an indication of fluency of language which was one of the striking features in the face of James G. Blaine.

"Bryan neglects none of the accessories of oratory. Nature richly endowed him with rare grace. He is happy in his manner of speech, and is well known on Hogarth's line of beauty. Melancholic is the one word that most aptly describes his voice. It is strong enough to be heard by thousands. It is sweet enough to charm those inclined to music. It is so modulated as not to vex the ear with monotony and can be stern and pathetic, fierce or gentle, serious or humorous, with the varying emotions of its master. In this young Bryan must have had a great deal of tact, and must have been a decided orator. He adorns his speeches with illustrations from the classics or from the common occurrences of everyday life with equal felicity and facility. Some passages from him are declaimed by boys at school—the ultimate tribute to American eloquence.

"But his crowning gift as an orator is his evident sincerity. He is candor itself, and is altogether convincing what he says himself; it is no marvel that he makes others believe.

"Bryan's first speech in the house—one on the tariff in 1892—fixed his status as one of the crack orators of this country. His astonishing oratory, electrified the entire nation and elicited the admiration of every young man in the land. Eminent orators logically predicted that he could never duplicate that far-sounding performance, that he would be like a wasp, biggest when

Mrs. Bryan is her husband's mascot. When the Bryan boom for president was launched, she took up with Bryan and decided to accompany him on his tour. With just a bit of feminine superstition she reminded him that in every instance where she had attended assemblies in which he was interested he had won. When she remained away from the last, and upon some occasions she invariably comforted him during the hour of defeat.

In the recent national committee meeting, when the Nebraska delegation was pending, she was not in the hotel room where the vote was taken. Bryan's opponents won. The next day she was a silent spectator at the committee meeting. The committee's report was reversed, and she waved her handkerchief with a greeting of joy to the Bryan adherents, who were delighted when the convention gave her the seats which her husband's political foes occupied the preceding day.

With a loyalty made eternal by a love that has never faltered, she saw the cause of her hero shaping itself into a reality. Her husband now had an opportunity to address the convention. She knew that in the fame of orators he would rise like a giant and that the standards would soon be at his feet. She knew that if he would open his mouth the convention would do the rest.

"I will be in the crowd to-day, William," she said, cheerfully, on the day her husband was nominated at Chicago. "Remember, I am your mascot. Do you think I have given up for your nomination, and it will come if you speak today, as I believe you will?"

Mrs. Bryan, who is a good-looking woman of medium build and height, is a few years the junior of her husband and quiet in her mannerisms. A wealth of dark hair has frizzed into a mass of intellectual attractiveness. Her deportment is simplicity itself. She is well posted on the issues of the day. Her home life is an ideal one. She cares comparatively little for society. Devotion to her husband, children and home are her prime characteristics. Her confidence in Mr. Bryan's future has always been unshaken.

Mrs. Bryan is a lawyer, as well as her husband, and, although she has never practised in the courts, she has often helped him in the preparation of his cases. She possesses good judgment and quick discernment. She studied law through sheer love of companionship for her husband, and was admitted, and that his congressional name would be pitched in diminuendo instead of crescendo. But he utterly refused to let her know his secret. In 1890 Webster himself would have come back to life, he could not by 20 years of ceaseless endeavor increase his fame as an orator; for while here before he butted his lofty head against the stone wall, Bryan, on the contrary, and endearing speech, stronger and ever stronger, manifesting new powers every time he arose. Perhaps his later addresses lacked something in fervor, brilliance and plausibility, but they grew constantly more logical, if less rhetorical."

HIS WIFE AND FAMILY.

Mrs. Bryan Is Her Husband's mascot in All Affairs of Life.

Mr. Bryan lives with a commanding wife, Ruth, in a comfortable residence in Lincoln, Neb. His family consists of Mrs. Bryan, Ruth, aged 11; William J., Jr., aged six, and Grace, aged five.

The study—in which both Mr. and Mrs. Bryan have desks—is an attractive room, filled with books, statuary and specimens of campaigns. There are busts and portraits of noted men, and there are two butcher knives which Mr. Bryan used in the campaign with Field to refute the latter's boasts of the effects of his oratory.

When Mr. Bryan was in Illinois college he boarded with Dr. H. K. Jones, a relative, who had been one of the famous Concord school. It was during Mr. Bryan's junior year at college that he met Miss Mary E. Baird, a junior in the same class. They became engaged the same year. She was graduated the day before Mr. Bryan and was valedictorian of her class of eight, and was thus a fit match for him, who was valedictorian of a class of 15. She was born in Perry, Ill., where her father was a merchant.

The death of Mr. Bryan's father, three months ago, has cast a shadow over the family, but the wife and son are comforted by the knowledge that he had a long and useful life.

Mrs. William J. Bryan. This portrait is a true representation of the wife of the speaker, for she is handsomely and gracefully dressed, and is on good terms with the audience before they open their lips. Of the latter class Bryan is a shining example. His appearance is a passport to the hearts of all men who can think and read.

Mr. Bryan is a colleague scholar, and has stored away in his consciousness much of the golden grain of wisdom and little of the husks, and it is all there for use, either as argument or embellishment. Some men are so ugly and ungainly that it is a positive advantage to have them as speakers, for their handsomeness and gracefulness that they are on good terms with the audience before they open their lips. Of the latter class Bryan is a shining example. His appearance is a passport to the hearts of all men who can think and read.

THE BRYAN HOME AT LINCOLN, NEB.

mitted to the Nebraska bar soon after they arrived there. She has a great fondness for politics, and follows her husband in his political campaigns. Her literary tastes are highly cultivated, and she has written much and well. She is a great favorite in Lincoln, where she is a leading member of Sorosis and other women's clubs.

The Boy Orator. How the Democratic Candidate Won This Significant Title. Bryan was a remarkable child in tender years, and could read and write long before he was six years old. He received no special education, but was taught to read by a schoolboy of a young man in the district school of his native village. The oratorical powers which have startled the people of the United States were developed at a very early age. When a mere boy, Bryan was accustomed to stand up before his playmates at school and pour forth words of eloquence.

This wonderful gift brought distinction to Bryan in his childhood, and when he had reached his 12th year his father took him to a great democratic convention in St. Louis, Mo., where there the boy began his political career.

After hearing addresses from the most distinguished men in the state, the boy orator mounted the platform. There was an oppressive silence and a smothered awe when the young stripling made his appearance. The lad commenced to speak to the thousands before him in tones commanding and eloquent. He displayed a knowledge of the questions of the current campaign, which was simply startling to all present.

He had proceeded but a short time, when the audience had become spell-bound under the sway of his eloquence. Soon a ripple of applause greeted the speaker. Then the audience, catching up the enthusiasm of the young orator, became so狂热 that he could not proceed because of the deafening cheering which greeted every sentence. When he closed there was a tremendous outburst of enthusiasm. The men of the audience carried him upon their shoulders.

The most notable personal characteristic is his amiable disposition. He has a winning smile and a kind word for all.

"This," said an intimate friend, "with his personal magnetism, made him a universal favorite in Jacksonville, from which place he removed to Nebraska nine years ago. He was a member of the Presbyterian church and a leader in the organization of the congregation. I remember very well how he used to walk to church every Sunday with his wife and her blind father. His devotion to his wife and his mother died recently in Marion county, Ill., where she had lived nearly all her life."

Bryan's first law case was in Jacksonville, 12 years ago. He was sent to the local justice's court to look after a case involving $20 or so, which had been filed by a woman. Two hours was as careful in preparing his arguments as he had been arguing before the United States supreme court. He won the case, and when he entered the office, with his face beaming with smile, he said, "I have won my first case!"

In 1880, when Bryan was a student, he was talking low tariff, just as he began to talk free silver more than three years ahead of the crowd. Since that time Mr. Bryan has been lecturing on the subject of the tariff and the coming of silver in accordance with the wishes of the union for every state of the union. For a time he was the editor of an Omaha newspaper, but the editorial tripped him and was not congenial to him as the stump and the platform, and he did not long remain in the sametum.

A STUDENT OF ORATORY.

What His Old School Teacher Has to Say of Him.

Prof. S. S. Hamill, of Deatur, Ill., is the teacher under whom William J. Bryan studied elocution while he was attending Illinois college at Jacksonville. Prof. Hamill says it was Bryan's deep earnestness in the preparation of his speeches which made him the orator of national repute that he is. "It was in 1878," said Prof. Hamill, "that Bryan first came into one of my classes. He was a good student, and stood first in all his studies, excepting in the Centaur Company, 77 Murray Street, New York City.

"Castoria is the best remedy for children of which I have ever known. I have not far distant when mothers will consider the real interest of their children, and use Castoria instead of the various quack nostrums which are destroying their loved ones, by forcing them to drink them, and other hurtful agents down their throats, sending them to premature graves."

FOR JUDGE COURT OF APPEALS,
JAMES D. WHITE,
OF BALLARD,

WE DEMAND the free and unlimited coinage of both gold and silver at the present legal ratio of 16 to 1, without waiting for the aid or consent of any other nation. We demand that the standard silver dollar shall be a full legal tender equally with gold for all debts, public and private...—Democratic National Plat form, 1896.

Free coinage means that silver and gold bullion shall be coined without charge by the United States mints.

Unlimited coinage means that all the gold and all the silver presented at the United States mints shall be coined into money.

The ratio of 16 to 1 means that the number of grains of pure silver in a silver dollar shall be sixteen times the number of grains of pure gold in a gold dollar.

By a full legal tender is meant that when a debtor offers either gold or silver to a creditor in any sum whatever, the creditor is bound to accept the same and discharge the debtor from his liability.

The Courier-Journal's latest scheme is to have goldbugs from out in the State, who pretend to be silver men, write fool letters urging all sorts of ridiculous propositions, which the Courier Journal discusses editorially as "candid admissions." These letters are signed "Convert," "Farmer" or some other such name, but it is easy enough to see that they are written in the Courier-Journal office by some of the renegade Democrats who are posing as financiers of the John Sherman school. There are very few things a money shark can't hire somebody to do.

Dr. Clardy richly deserves the handsome endorsement he received. He has been faithful in all things. His record was without a blemish. The people have great confidence in him. He will be elected with Bryan and Sewall in November by the largest majority that has been given in this district in many years.—Owensboro Messenger.

Tammam Hall has declared for Bryan and Sewall at a meeting of the Executive committee of 75, with only 4 dissenting votes. Bryan will accept the nomination at Madison Square next Wednesday and open the campaign for constitutional money right under the noses of the Wall street gold gamblers.

The Republicans have nominated G. P. Thomas, the representative from Trigg county in the last legislature, as their candidate for Congress in the First District. Mr. Thomas is a young man about 25 years of age, who is about as near to Congress now as he ever will be.

Democrats of the State are cautioned not to be alarmed by the "uprising of Sound Money Democrats" in Hopkinsville. It is the same hand that knifed the ticket last year and there are not enough of them to make a ripple on the surface of Christian county politics. There may be 100 in the county, but 600 ready recruits from other parties will take their places in the great contest of the masses against the classes.

In many counties next week Democrats will attend the goldbug conventions and have fun out of the bolters by capturing their meetings and sending true Democrats to the Louisville powwow to break it up. This scheme of the silver men will doubtless cause some "mass conventions" to dwindle into secret caucuses in the back rooms of banks.

The Democratic campaign will be opened in Louisville to-morrow night with a big Bryan and Sewall ratification meeting on the court house steps. All railroads have given half fare rates and the meeting is expected to be an eye-opener to the bolters and sheebeads of Louisville. Many able speakers will deliver short addresses.

In Henderson county Dr. Clardy will get 1,69 and Tanner 5,31 of the 7 votes of the county. The delegates are W. J. Moore, Geo. Givens, H. M. Stanley, R. S. Easton, W. N. Royster, R. D. Vance and H. B. Beverley and six alternates.

Editor Clarence E. Woods, of the Richmond Register, was married Wednesday to Miss Mattie Cheneau of Richmond. They have gone to Rock Bridge Alum Springs, Va., to spend the honeymoon.

Senator Wolcott, one of the Republican Senators from Colorado, has announced that he will support the McKinley ticket, and Republicans of Denver have held a meeting and demanded his resignation.

Cornelius Vanderbilt, Jr., and Miss Grace Wilson, several years his senior, who had been talking of getting married all summer, were united last Monday and left New York on a bridal tour.

Dr. Clardy came out of Daviess county half a vote better off than was at first announced. He will get 10,8 to 2,4 for Tanner, in the Madisonville convention.

The Missouri State Democratic convention is in session at St. Louis. Lou V. Stevens, a free silver banker, is likely to be the nominee for Governor.

The Democratic Congressional convention in the Third district will be held at Bowling Green, August 19. John S. Rhea is the only candidate.

A movement is on foot to get Gov. John Young Brown to run for Congress in the Louisville district, as a platform Democrat.

Hon. Richard P. Bland has been nominated for Congress by acclamation by the Democrats of the Eighth Missouri district.

Brunswick, Md., a Republican stronghold, has elected a Democratic mayor on a free silver platform. Maryland will all right.

The Uniontown Telegram is getting out a daily during the fair and making a very creditable paper of it.

Senator Gorman, of Maryland, will assist in the management of the Democratic campaign.

Not a single Democratic paper in Indiana has bolted.

Hon. W. R. Morrison, of Illinois, will support the Democratic ticket.

Charles E. Bentley and James H. Southgate have accepted the nomination for President and Vice President respectively at the hands of the "National" Prohibition party which bolted from the regular Prohibition convention.

A white tramp, near St. Joseph, La., who confessed that he had outraged and murdered a respectable wife woman of that vicinity, was tied to a tree, riddled with bullets and the body burned.

Mr. U. J. Holland, an old and highly respected citizen of Madison, died Monday. Mr. Holland was well known in manufacturing circles.

It is regarded as almost certain that Logan county Populists will support Bryan for Congress.

At Elizabethtown a white vagrant was sold at auction, the purchase going $12,75 for the man's time for six months.

BRYAN'S LUCKY NUMBER.

And If Omens Be True He Will Be the President in 1897.

Louisville, Ky., July 13.—There is, perhaps, no superstition so general throughout the civilized world as that regarding the figure 13 being an unlucky number. How it originated, perhaps, will never be known, but it is generally attributed to the presence of the Twelve Apostles and the fact that Judas Iscariot was also a world-wide superstitious regarding the figure seven being a lucky number; and throughout all the railroads of this country, the engineers invariably select the 7 in preference to any other engine. It is said that most of the railroads consider having the engine 13 because it is difficult to get an engineer to take charge of it.

When the Democratic nominee for President, W. J. Bryan, arrived at Chicago several weeks before the convention, he put up a bill to the name of which is spelled with seven letters—Clifton. The clerk assigned him the room No. 7. The committee in charge of the arrangements had just seven coupons printed on the tickets of admission, and there were just seven business sessions.

THE CONVENTION FIELD.

The Democratic convention convened in the seventh month of the year—July—on the seventh day of month, at a city, the name of which is spelled with just seven letters—Chicago.

The name of the nominee, and by the way, there are just seven letters in nominine, is spelled with seven letters, William—seven letters—W. J. Bryan, seven letters.

He was nominated by W. T. Lewis, seven letters, and the first State to nominate him was Genesee County, which is spelled with seven letters.

Mr. Bryan's home is in a city of seven letters, Lincoln, and the State whose voice secured him the nomination was Mountainous seven letters. The chairman of the national committee in charge of the convention was Harry, seven letter, and the new chairman is S. M. White, seven letters. He wears a No. 7 shoe and a No. 7 hat, and there were just seven States that followed the time before Illinois.

In some cases we find the prison cells decorated with lace curtains and tables covered with the best books of the day."

AN ARISTOCRATIC PAUPER.
Run Through $80,000, Then Worked on a City Woodpile.

Among those provided with food and shelter at the Municipal lodging house recently was a young man whose dress would scarcely indicate that he had been reduced to a penniless condition. What will it be inferred from his actions that he was accustomed to seeking accommodations furnished free by a charitable community. For three days and nights he was obliged to remain under the roof of that institution. One of the rules of the home, for the destitute is that each person provided for must exert a certain amount of energy upon the woodpile. In this way any individual may earn a night's lodging or a meal of victuals.

Theodore Frazier was the name registered upon the book, but the name of the youth was not particularized, and it was not for two days that the remarkable history of the young man was learned. He had taken his turn at the woodpile, and, although quite awkward in the use of a buck-saw, he paid the price asked for the accommodation afforded him. Supt. Cutler of the lodging house observed that Frazier carried an unusual amount of gold in his teeth.

"Nearly every tooth in my head is crowned with gold, and what is more I have a diamond set tooth," Frazier told the superintendent. Then showed an implant in which was set a solitaire a little less than half a carat in weight.

"I had that put in there when I had more money than I knew what to do with," he observed.

"All through my life I was provided with good things this world affords, and my father being a prosperous man left me at his death the sum of $80,000, principally in currency, which that could be easily converted. In less than 18 months after the man's death placed at my disposal it had all slipped through my hands, and I found myself one morning a pauper."

The young man's father realized a fortune from the sale of an iron mine in the south, but just where the son did not care to say. His own history was all he would tell. In registering for his first night's lodgings he gave Memphis, Tenn., as his address, and that is probably his former home. He is now 24 years old and came into inheritance about the time he attained his majority.

THE FESTIVE CENTIPEDE.

A Western Mining Engineer Relates a Rattlesnake Experience.

"Rattlesnakes, scorpions, tarantulas, gila monsters—they are all good things to keep away from," said a mining engineer recently returned from the west, "but for the around centipedes they simply aren't fit to eat with a centipede. No, they are not necessarily fatal. No poisonous insects are, notwithstanding the stories one hears to the contrary. But they are bad enough. Did you ever see one? They are not pretty, and they don't look in the least like these thousand legged worms which we call centipedes here. The genuine thing may be anywhere from one to six inches long. I killed two, each eight inches in length, but it is not common. These ladies consist of a lot of joints something like a string of flattened beads. Each joint has two legs connected with it, and in the ends of these lies the poison. There are 19 joints, so that, although he hasn't 100 feet, as his name implies, he is still very well provided with them. Thirty-eight legs and every leg a sting! He can't attack you from the ground, of course. He doesn't have to, for it is at night when there is the greatest danger from these pests."

"He is an investigating turn of mind, and is fond of exploring your body and your clothes. Scorpions or any of the other creatures sting only when they wish to in self-defense; but with a centipede it is different."

"He may simply walk over one, with each step making something over three dozen foot prints, and each of these will leave a running sore, around which the flesh will finally slough off—a horrible scar being the result. If the creature is angered or startled—and it takes very little to annoy him—every claw is instantly driven into the flesh, and the result is ten times worse."

"So far as speed of traveling goes, the centipede would be lost in the turn of many insects; but but this is his hunting specialty of his; I think he would be the quickest creature that lives."

"There was a remarkable case in point which took place during this last trip of mine," continued the engineer.

"We were camped somewhere near the southern end of the line dividing New Mexico from Arizona. It was just down when something woke me. My instrument man and a rodman lay on the opposite side of the little open tent. The rodman was also awake, and was gazing silently with an expression of horror on his face, for the thin sheet of canvas between them, from under the arm of the sleeping man, appeared the linked body of a big centipede, fully six inches long.

"It went forward a little way and stopped; then crawled leisurely on again. There was nothing to do that I could think of. A sudden movement, a sound, or even a shadow, would at once cause the brute to fasten himself."

"The warmth of the body seemed to please him, and he stopped again. Luckily the transmittor never stirred. The inaction was ghastly, and I saw the rodman's hand gradually very gradually move toward the saddle which served him as a pillow, disappear under it. Then it slowly emerged, grasping a heavy pistol, cocked. Always with the same deliberation, the muzzle was brought close to his head, and the bullet passed through his brain. The invalid's eyes were closed, and he lay dead.

The invalid's eyes were closed, and he lay dead.

"We never thought the injured man would survive, but after weeks of delirium, he began slowly to recover. When the obstinate wound had healed the scar was as though a red hot ladle had been laid across the man's body; the path of the centipede forming the handle, and the bowl, a place as large as one's hand, made by the dying clinch. I'll take my account straight, if I have a choice. No centipedes in mine."

WOLCOTT LEEBAR BEARD.
The Dollar Sign.

Seven different explanations have been made of the origin of the dollar mark, one of the most popular making it a contraction of the letters U. S. written over each other in the style of a monogram, while another declares it to be a contraction of the emblem formerly used on a Spanish piece of eight. This was a rude representation of the pillars of Hercules, crossed and united by a scroll, with the motto: "Plus ultra." The hurried attempt to represent this device in written characters resulted, it is said, in the sign now used.

Height of Waves.

Dr. Schott does not think that the maximum height of the waves is very great. Some observers have estimated it at 60 or 40 feet in a wind of the force represented by 11 on the Beaufort scale (the highest number of which is 12), and Dr. Schott's maximum is just 32 feet. He believes that in great tempests waves of more than 60 feet are rare, and even those of 50 feet are exceptional. In the ordinary trade winds the height is five or six feet.

RUFUS LOCKWOOD.
Noted Lawyer Hired Himself Out by the Day.

With the name of Rufus Lockwood is recalled to mind one of the most extraordinary geniuses that the state of California ever produced. It is years now since Lockwood held sway in the courts of San Francisco. He was, in his day, perhaps the best lawyer in the state, and it was only because of his utter indifference to pecuniary matters that he did not leave a large fortune behind him.

Lockwood went at one time to Horace Hawes, a very distinguished lawyer and the author of the consolidation act which is now in force. Hawes had a reputation for close figuring, and Lockwood knew it. He said: "Mr. Hawes, I'll hire myself to you for one year from date at a salary of $25 a day, payable every night."

"All right," said Hawes, delighted to engage the services of the brightest mind in the state at so low a figure—for the salary was a great one in those days—and the bargain was sealed. It was 11 o'clock in the morning. But from that time on, it is said, Hawes never missed an opportunity of reminding Lockwood of his bondage. He would say, in the presence of others: "Lockwood, go back; Lockwood, do this or that; etc." Lockwood never said a word, but did as he was bidden, and Hawes enjoyed his triumph.

Finally it came to the day when the year's engagement terminated. There was a most important lawsuit on hand, which Lockwood had made a careful study of, no one in the country could have handled it as he did. Well, on the day in question Lockwood stood in court an array of law books in front of him, and expounded his views in masterly fashion. Suddenly he looked up at the clock and saw that it was the hour of 11. Closing the book from which he was quoting, he turned to Hawes, who was sitting beside him, and said: "Mr. Hawes, a year ago to-day at this hour I contracted to work for you for one year. My time's up, the contract is canceled and I am going."

This did not satisfy his master for the humiliation heaped upon him. Hawes was in the greatest consternation; he could not possibly take up the thread of the case where Lockwood had left it and he begged and implored him to proceed. But Lockwood remembered, and he turned a deaf ear to all persuasions. He kept his word; the contract had expired.—San Francisco Bulletin.

A SILENT SMUGGLER.
An Ingenious Trick Recently Exposed in Paris.

An ingenious smuggling trick was recently accidentally exposed in Paris. Every afternoon for weeks past a handsome carriage, drawn by two fine horses and occupied by a well-dressed woman, has driven out of Paris, and, after an absence of a couple of hours, would drive back into the city. The lady was accompanied by an invalid, a man with the high collar of his coat turned up to his ears and his hat drawn over his brows, so that a very small portion of his pale face was visible. The customs officials always open the door of any passing carriage, and ask in a perfunctory way if its inmates have anything to declare, but they never make any investigation, and the party might have continued its daily rite for years to come but for an accident.

On opening the carriage door the official noticed nothing but that the lady had dressed her handkerchief on the floor of the carriage and gallantly hastened to pick it up, but in his haste struck violently against the invalid's legs. He apologized civilly, but the invalid paid no more attention to the apology than he had to the blow, and the official, thinking his silence mysterious, laid his hand on the invalid's shoulder, whereupon, to his utter amazement, the lady opened the carriage door and alighted as the coachman descended from his box, and both took to their heels, leaving their equipment and their companion.

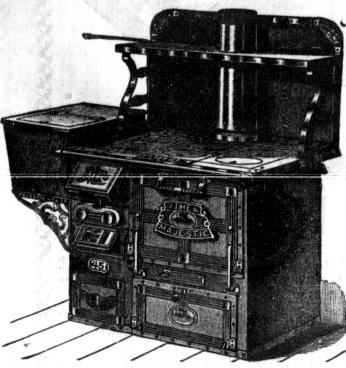

The cause of their mysterious flight was soon discovered. The invalid was made of tin, with a wax head, and the tin body was filled with brandy. To judge from the length of time this fraud has been kept up, the profit must have been very large, but the swindlers have not yet been caught, so it is a matter of speculation merely as to the identity of the people who organized so elaborate and successful a scheme.

SILVER IN PENNSYLVANIA.

Effective Work Will Carry the State for Bryan

"I have lately been up in the anthracite coal region of Pennsylvania," said Mr. W. J. Brennan, of the National, "and I want to tell you that free silver has won converts by the thousands in all that section. I talked with a great many of the men who worked in the mines, for having been compelled to work in the coal fields of labor in the coal belt, they know scores of them personally. They nearly all told me that they were going to vote for Bryan. For many years the miners workers have experienced a steady and rapid increase with an average employment of not over 100 days in the year, the children have scarcely been able to make a living for their families. The farmers are almost as bad off, for a large percentage have given up their homes and property to the speculators through the depreciation of farming land and agricultural products."

"Knowing Pennsylvania as I do, I have no hesitation in saying that with the proper effort and organization of the State on the part of men who can explain the silver side of the controversy to the people, it is debatable ground, and the Republicans would be put to their best traps to carry it off. That is why I am for Bryan. It is sure to go that way next November, as fallacious as the other notion that Senator Quay is all-powerful and can control the voters as he will."

Compulsory Education Law.

Now that the fall terms of the public schools are beginning there is much inquiry concerning the terms of the compulsory education law, which is now in force.

In every state, guardian or other person having control of a child between the ages of 7 and 14 years, must send the same to a public or private school at least eight consecutive weeks, unless the child is taught at home the same studies that are taught in the public schools.

It is the same examination that the children of the public schools do, or unless mental or moral condition of the child render it impracticable for him to attend, or unless the child is too young to attend or is of tender age.

That is why it is the only state with which the public schools are everywhere esteemed so highly by all who value good health. Its beneficial effects are due to the fact, that it insures cleanliness without debilitating the organs on which it acts. It is therefore of great benefit to the physical and mental effects to note when you purchase that you have the genuine article, which is manufactured by the California Company, who are the best and by all reputable druggists.

If in the enjoyment of health you desire regular laxatives or other remedies are then needed. If afflicted with any actual disease, one may be convenient to the medical practitioner, but if you are of a delicate constitution should have the best, and with the well-informed everywhere. Syrup of Figs stands highest and is most largely used and gives most general satisfaction.
